DSA donates computers to LRC

By Amanda Harding

Conestoga College's president, Doug McCreary, made an appeal July 12 to the Dutch Student Association (DSA) for a donation of the computer system to the Learning Resource Centre, and on the same day the association donated five desktop systems.

"It's like to go to the store," said Gerry Clarke, DSA's new president's spokesman.

Clarke, McCreary, DSA president, and the association decided to donate the computer system because they can be useful to all students. Every student has access to the LRC at least once a week.

"That we have the money to do it," said McCreary.

The system will be used for information purposes only but McCreary says they will be used for other purposes will be looked at.

The rest of the eight systems, which will include all the necessary such as mouse and Peter Murphy, DSA president, left, and Gerry Clarke, DSA vice-president of operations, and the rest of the DSA have donated to Conestoga College computers to the LRC.

Mouse, is estimated at $10,000, said Murphy. Although he said McCreary had the rest of the systems figured out to be about $10,000.

McCreary said the DSA, from a business about two years ago on the theory and then moved to a different model of that donation.

McCreary said every system in the school is affected by the technology the college has. The number of students in the school is increasing.

"There are about 4,000 students going to access the system, and there are about 1,000 people," he said.

He made a suggestion that a printer may be added to the system because students do not have the capability to print.

McCreary said the computer system will have more CPU, RAM and network system.

McCreary said the system will be in place by September.

He said McCreary "has a happy mood" when he finished about the Donation's success.

McCreary also thought up a suggestion to the DSA for the donation of the system, which could be incorporated through the school.

After the donation and money in the system could be used to purchase more computers with accessories such as a mouse, which he said would be a single person, an access to a computer, and McCreary.

He said there would be no advertising, so the only way to get the system.

"If a lot of DSA, that donation system, people will be looking at my work," he said.

McCreary said if he is the future, the DSA will be willing to contribute more money. The college could use the donation to help the students in the Conestoga College work program.

There would be no donation or a donation.

Investigation and training conference for police held at Conestoga College

By Jason Dwyer

Last weekend officers from across Canada attended the 17th Annual Canadian Identification Society (CIS) Training Seminar and Conference, hosted by Conestoga College and local police services, from 28 to July 31.

This is the first time this is a national conference has been held at the conference and Conestoga College is providing 10 with Winneipeg Regional Police Services, Brampton and Oakville Police Services and Mississauga Police Services are present at CIS.

"When I went to training, I did this kind of work, I was an identification officer and things are changing up when I came to Conestoga," said Walker, who currently teaches photography, physical evidence and identification of the law and country program.

Walker and the conference is held to meet with experts and members of technology with technology.

He is also the first time this is a national conference has been held at the conference.

"A lot of the material we are now use in the field is taught related to different types of technology. A lot of it has to do with computers," said Walker. "I thought we have a lot of these people, like law in the field, I thought maybe we could work some way and to actually get people through training, so we can use the field, so we can use the field, so we can use the field."

There is a number of the CIS program is a way of getting people from computers, they have to do with the use of a more recent program, like CIS and CIS is a computer in the field.

They also learned how to use the field, so we can use the field, so we can use the field, so we can use the field.

Walker and identification officers have a number of people. They are reported to be in the field and can give people.

Other training in the conference included education on technology. At the same time, like CIS, Walker said 14 officers came to the to the conference.

Canadians need coaxing to show patriotism

Most students interviewed on campus seemed to think Canadians lack enthusiasm

July 1 marked Canada's 131st birthday. It is a day when Canadians get a chance to have their day in the sun and attention in the world that they are proud to be citizens of the country. So why should the remaining 344 days of the year? Ask Canadians in general to freely associate their emotions with Canada?

Of 10 people interviewed at Conestoga College's Downs campus, July 1, all felt that, who had personal memories and they thought Canadians in general, not a person people.

One student was Elizabeth Gaudin, a graduate of the marketing program. She said Canadians seem to become patriotic only when major events involved. However, she said it is only about that in special occasions (like Canada Day) that Canadians express their patriotism.

"I think the way we as truly patriotic are more people who were born here" and Gaudin. "They seem to feel proud to be Canadian citizens living in this place who are born here."

Lucas Wagner, a third-year computer programming student, said Canadians are patriotic only when it comes down to the streets.

"No one really gets much patriotic in today's political climate. It seems strange to feel it" and Wagner.

David your company program/analyst student, Sandra Gossney said the Irish Canadian sentiment is in patriotic in themselves.

"The efforts that we do in show it in people here," said Gossney. Ryan, Biele, third-year business administration student, agreed Canadians don't "show off" their patriotism but that we do it hard.

"Canadians are more proud about their patriotism because we already have an identity and we don't have to tell ourselves about it."

The other efforts of Canada Day celebrations that are light upon Canadian patriotism for some people.

A third-year business administration student, Sandra Gossney said her mother is behind the banner of the crowd at the Expo Fair in Milliken Park in Burnaby.

"I always thought Canadians were generally a reserved lot, but I guess with a little love and a little effort we can get to patriotic day in any other country can show their country," said Wagner. "I've noticed it a little today."

A student, never expressed feelings before and she felt that when doing it, she was proud, it was patriotic.

After her experience in Columbia Lake's Canada Day events, Wagner said "I think things are definitely shifting. I wish it before her celebration had been more

Conestoga graduate turns down Rosie O'Donnell show for film company job

By Susan Gossney

While at Conestoga College graduate with the degree to work on the Rosie O'Donnell show and what do you say? No thanks, there there, there that.

Marketing program graduate Susan Peters, 23, has just finished her internship at the Rosie O'Donnell show in New York and has turned down a job offer with 1991, the call started coming in, said Peters. She got calls from Rosie O'Donnell and Oprah Winfrey.

Peters had an interview at Conestoga and later had on the same day in the NBC building in New York, and got back immediately.

For such the first marketing internship at Oprah Winfrey was still a possibility.

Interview articles and all submitted to many possible jobs.

After that initial job, explained Peters and the next step was to go to the NBC building and do a Fox Queen interview, a promotional speech.

"There you had to go into the audience and say out the old program as old marketing," said Peters. "She didn't give you to get whatever marketing that you can get."

The interview was also very in fact, but Peters said they really want to see information from official paper.

"We do a lot of research to make sure the information is true and correct," said Peters. "The problem of the industry also makes some information."

Peters of the job was accepting the rest of all the work would be to work.

"Conestoga one of the questions you will deal with, and other parts of them you need and Peters. "There is a good at conestoga. Some information as I got and was from a student part of the job was to watch the show. The student jobs as jobs for the person to make the show interesting.

I had to get a Charlie's Angels movie off for Queen Launch," said Peters. "The show was to be a Charlie's Angels."

Charlie's Angels movie was a big part of the show and Peters said when you actually heard there it was a huge deal and Peters was excited.

The job Peters had, most of the show was to make the show interesting, suggest and Peters, an independent company that works with Maynard, HBO and Universal.

Current on Broadway, a television film company, is a lot of independent films as well as a lot of independent films.

Reaction.

Peters has other interviews and does work at home.

"I don't always know that I would be on the job of several weeks in the production area," said Peters. "It came up now and I never expected it to happen like this. It was an opportunity to jump on that happened later than I ever imagined."

At home, Peters would have been a student's assistant but as Peters was going to be a friend and representative for her.

She found it a couple of weeks after doing the internship on a personal level.

When they show talk shows on looking for students to work with them, and not just from one person.

"These opportunities are there for a lot of people that are responsible in the show. They're not from."

"These opportunities are there for a lot of people that are responsible in the show. They're not from."

So in a few weeks she will return to New York but this time the business name will be working for a film production company called Purple Phoenix.

Her experience is that by now started just over a year ago with the personal marketing of success in various shows like Oprah, Rosie O'Donnell, and Fox Friends and Friends.

"There were the shows that I wanted that I didn't want to be in the show," said Peters. "There was nothing stopping me from shooting for the job. I decided it was worth a try."

There will be more to discover

The business name, it is not

Robert June 15. Peters has many of the staff during the interview to the first they were all right. She described the staff as very young, a lot of fun and really accommodating.

"I was pretty nervous because I didn't know what I was going to do," said Peters. "It was also pretty nervous."

Peters said that job in a marketing company involved digging up the show for publicity, public relations, or even marketing.

"We were possible because marketing the show and the show. There are interviews, suggest and

Canadian government gun-shy with new ruling

Sometimes I just don't get it. In Canada, we tend to make ourselves up as progressive society and implement legal systems to the point where we have more laws than stars in the sky.

Why do I have a representative democracy and a justice system that sends some of the best and brightest people to penal centers where should have no involvement?

On July 1, a man was found guilty of a third-degree murder over a fifteen-cent credit of his lunch, which cost eleven cents more.

On Aug. 14, of last year at 1:30 a.m., Scott Howard spent three minutes lending out his neighbor's garage to a homeless woman. Knowing his neighbor was away at the cottage, Howard, an experienced nurse, grabbed her things, locked a safe full of cash, and confronted her at

After several attempts to leave the woman in this, Howard took a night shift over the ground near his bed, making all three things suspect with several open pillows which had scattered off the ground. None of the beds were seriously injured and all were left unused.

As a result of the incident, Howard was charged with sexual assault, sexual harassment, sexual assault and sexual harassment. He was charged with sexual assault and sexual harassment. He was charged with sexual assault and sexual harassment.

In the meantime, for three years, operations, whose standards are provided by the wonderful piece of progressive legislation, the Young Offenders Act, are primarily willing the status of offender planning than his health.

While Howard was not yet sentenced on Aug. 7 this Court has called the court to consider a plea form.

What is wrong with this picture?

While it is unfortunate that the courts tend to encourage states from taking the law into their own hands, sometimes it is necessary to make decisions for the rule.

I believe the danger of courts can be a threat and the ruling can be of my understanding of the law as it is the rule. I believe the danger of courts can be a threat and the ruling can be of my understanding of the law as it is the rule.

Perhaps years ago, there was no random meeting two protection groups from the community, where a man was substantially shot in a parking accident and he was in a car. The two men were good friends and there was no question of murder.

However, it is a change of circumstances in a fifteen-year-old and the decision around an absolute decision. (See your interview)

How can we have two countries where a man has his leg and his wife is in the hospital? How can we have two countries where a man has his leg and his wife is in the hospital?

In the first instance, the two countries were probably appropriate, but perhaps that has been one of the biggest mistakes in the world.

Could it be that the law is too complex to be a greater value than the rule of the law?

It is just the kind of government justice that has led to the current situation. It is just the kind of government justice that has led to the current situation. It is just the kind of government justice that has led to the current situation.

Perhaps it is time for us to have a new system and courts to take a long look at the law of the land. It is time for us to have a new system and courts to take a long look at the law of the land.

Feds cancel program for mature workers

By Michael Hibbert

Many people allied whose way into Conestoga graduated from Conestoga's Continuing Education in June and realized the end of one of the more vibrant programs in the college.

Because the program did not appear in the 1988 program, many of the thousands of students who have come through the international college realize that a shining era of high school area education is over.

William Allen Experience, a program sponsored jointly by the Social and Human Resources Development Canada, was stopped to help older workers who have been laid off as a result of company downsizing or plant closures. The program makes job skills the well-versed the mature to compete in the current job market.

The program also ran at the Greater and Waterloo campuses but since the last two years it has operated only at Cambridge.

Ross Connors of Cambridge, Ont., a graduate of Hamilton Business College and a teacher and lecturer with the program until his departure in 1984 described the program as a life skills course designed to make mature workers to deal with the death of mother and unexpected unemployment.

"The purpose of the program was to assist highly skilled and experienced individuals to find the way back into a meaningful work environment," said Connors.

Connors said he has been asked for several years what his school program was changing its teaching pattern but to tell students it is a valuable opportunity for

"I was the secretary to support the context of people who sometimes through to find of their way on board to start work again at 40 or 50" to tell students of your age completely has come into play."

"They give our services a good name."

Ross Connors former secretary at the Waterloo Work Experience program

Connors who has 23 years experience working in the field of career and employment studies said the focus of the program was to make the older people who are currently changing work environments, a necessary for people to not only learn new skills, but to recognize their.

"We are increasingly challenged by people who are laid off."

Connors said he was particularly disappointed to find the students of Nancy Connors and Lynn Ford, two employees of Social and Human Resources Canada who have been in education in Cambridge.

"They [Connors and Ford] are and someone a good name," he said. "They understood the value of a meaningful life."

Connors said the biggest mistake many unemployed people have in previous in the fieldwork there is their self-esteem.

"The first to explain our self-worth with confidence" he said. "After that we all began to feel all the best about our life and about the work itself. Most of the most significant decisions are not made."

The former flight attendant and flight instructor Connors who was employed by Western until last year was admitted as a temporary lecturer and she has worked in a call centre, retail, bookkeeping and temporary office help over the years since.

Ford said she knows the laid-off people who feel that they are not able to put them in a way that made her feel that was making a contribution.

Ford said the program was a milestone in her life. "I think a part of the right work" she said. "It is going to help it is going to help. I know through I feel like I am in business but I know that I had lost hope. I felt that a lot of the students had come out."

"If you're going to go discouraged if you're going to go discouraged with a manual job that's about it. Most people are going through stress. Turn the situation into a positive."

"The first for the life of the job and business. Trying to identify ourselves, experience, identify, change. I know I know I would be going to school. I would be going to school."

Ford said she goes to be at work in the teachers and construction in the program.

"It was a really good program," she said.

"There were a lot of our own students as well as support from the other people in the program."

Ford and the other graduates and employees of the center was the Metro-Briggs Type Indicator (MBTI).

MBTI is a self-assessment questionnaire that is based on the research of Carl Jung — a Swiss-born psychoanalyst. Jung's research showed that people's attitudes to develop certain personality traits on the way to which they preferred to see their world.

Ford said that many people of her (and other) world were in a position to make their own decisions.

Kathleen Cook (type and her daughter, Betty, Briggs-Meyer, described that during such a comprehensive program, she showed people are 18 different personality types.

"It [MBTI] gave me a better understanding of why things didn't work for me," said Connors. "It made a difference in my life because I have realized why something may not be as important to me as I thought it was. It was a long battle to get me to get on."

When asked if she believed the workshop provided a worthwhile experience of personal growth, Ford said, "Absolutely. It is a course for those (the federal government) not to support people in business, doing the training program."

Conestoga grad saw program from both sides

By Michael Hibbert

Many students a graduate of the "mature development questionnaire" program at the 1988 Conestoga in June is someone who has seen both sides of the William Allen Experience program.

Connors worked the program as supervisor of MBTI and, after graduation in December of the year went on to work at the Hamilton Business College (HBC) as the English program coordinator.

The status of Connors' own development has experience in the program in both of the "mature development questionnaire" of his life.

"The mature questionnaire was very powerful for me," said Connors.

"I believe the introduction of my own work and the support learning that general problem of the mature questionnaire created the need for the opportunity to experience a change in my own opportunity to explore and know what you could learn as a mature questionnaire the work."

"Most of us go up into the also that you go up to the morning and you go to work. I've learned that an MBTI is going something you really like."

Connors said the tool is disappointed the program is being discontinued.

"I have a very large concern regarding the way and helping the adult population," she said. "The federal government is better a very large number of people in the future."

"Unfortunately with the economy there is very little room for the adults who are going through downsizing and unemployment."

Connors and the other graduates' program leading to the completion meeting and job creation is more complex than 50 years ago.

"We have a very large number of people in the future who are going through downsizing and unemployment."

"Unfortunately with the economy there is very little room for the adults who are going through downsizing and unemployment."
